

The Great Rockefeller Energy Hoax

(Selected Excerpts)*

Here's proof how Kissinger and Rockefeller planned the 1973 Mid-East War to permit a mammoth oil price hike

BY C. B. BAKER

YOUTH ACTION has discovered a mass of evidence to prove that the October, 1973 Mid-East war was planned by the Rockefeller-Kissinger branch of the Council on Foreign Relations (CFR). The "Yom Kippur" War was one of the most cleverly contrived Rockefeller maneuvers in history. The war gave the Rockefeller oil gang the perfect excuse to skyrocket fuel prices to add to the CFR banker's profits (already bulging from the harvest of the 10-year no-win war in Vietnam).

In order to understand properly the strange conduct of the 1973 war, one must understand that Rockefeller and Kissinger put in the fix on both sides of the Israeli-Egyptian conflict.

When the Egyptian Army had overrun the Israeli Bar-Lev Defense Line, it advanced approximately seven to ten miles east of the Suez Canal and there it stopped. The controlled American press put out the cover story that the Egyptians were afraid to advance beyond the cover of their anti-aircraft defense rocket batteries which were on the west side of the canal. However, the Egyptian Army was heavily equipped with portable SAM-7 Russian Strella missiles which proved to be very effective against Israeli jets. The Egyptians had portable SAM-2 and SAM-3 missiles as well as the more effective SAM-6 missile on tracked vehicles (which had been moved across the Suez Canal with the Egyptian troops).

Despite the fact that Egypt was supposed to be engaged in "full scale" war with her worst enemy, President Sadat never bothered to call up the hundreds of thousands of army reserves or mobilize the Egyptian economy on a war footing. Egyptian economic and reserve mobilization would have been absolutely necessary in any genuine effort to destroy the Israeli Army. But wiping out the Israeli Army was not part of the Rockefeller-Kissinger war plan, which had been personally given to Sadat by David Rockefeller a few weeks before the war started in late September, 1973. David Rockefeller's pre-war visit to Cairo was generally kept out of the establishment press until the March 25, 1974 issue of Time magazine.

The Rockefeller-Kissinger war plan worked like this:

- (1) Veto the July, 1973 U.N. Peace Plan and force the Arabs into actual war to regain their conquered territory.
- (2) Once the war started, ship arms to Israel (to appease the hysterical Zionist mobs roaming the streets in the U.S.)
- (3) This in turn would automatically bring an oil cut-off by the Arab states.
- (4) Loudly proclaim an oil "shortage" and begin to carefully jack up domestic prices a few cents a week.
- (5) Pressure the oil producing nations to double and triple crude oil prices, which in turn would vastly skyrocket profits of the giant American oil firms, owned and controlled by the CFR international bankers.

The WASHINGTON OBSERVER NEWSLETTER of March 15, 1974 carried further proof that Kissinger had advance knowledge of the Mid-East war. The newsletter quoted statements made to it by a CIA informant three weeks before the October, 1973 Mid-East war, "Kissinger has also made a deal with the Kremlin about the Middle East, and there will soon be an outbreak of hostilities there." Kissinger promised the Soviets to reopen the Suez Canal so that Russian war vessels can have easy access to the Persian Gulf and their ally, India.

Between September 30 and October 6 (the day that the war started), Kissinger held a number of lengthy meetings with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin on the subject of the impending Mid-East war. During these conferences the Soviets gave Kissinger additional intelligence about the Arab battle plans. Kissinger, in turn, relayed the Soviet intelligence to his close buddy and co-racialist, Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan.

Moshe Dayan—An Inside Party to the Rockefeller War Fix

The above mentioned facts give ample proof that the Israeli military was fully aware of the impending Arab attack. Despite this awareness, nothing was done to warn or mobilize Israel's armed forces. In fact, the front line Israeli soldiers at Israel's Bar-Lev Defense Line on the Suez Canal were given no warning whatsoever. None of the intelligence that had been gathered by Israel's world-wide spy network was ever fed to the Jews on the front line who would face the Egyptian onslaught. The February 10, 1974 Washington Post stated that the soldiers in one Israeli position on the Bar-Lev Line were "showering and hanging out their laundry when the Egyptians began swarming across the canal."

Evidence that Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan was an inside party to the Rockefeller-Kissinger war plan emerged from the April 2, 1974 report of the Agranat Commission. Israel set up the Agranat Commission to investigate why the Jews got kicked in the pants in the 1973 war. The Commission's report revealed that as early as May, 1973, Dayan tipped off his officers on the general staff about the coming war with Syria and Egypt scheduled for late summer of 1973. It is interesting to note that Dayan passed this information down to his officers (including his intelligence staff). Usually such intelligence is passed up from the intelligence service to the Defense Minister. Unless of course, the Defense Minister has his own personal intelligence sources (Henry Kissinger, U.S.A. and Victor Louis, U.S.S.R.—two fellow international Jews who specialize in secret inside deals).

The single most damaging piece of evidence against Defense Minister Dayan, personally, also came from the Agranat Commission Report. On the morning of October 6, 1973, just a few hours before the war started, a massive buildup of Egyptian troops (including artillery, barges, and other water crossing equipment) at the edge of the Suez Canal was reported to the Israeli Cabinet. Even at that late date, despite all the evidence that the outbreak of war would take place in a few hours, Dayan opposed calling up Israeli reserves. Prime Minister Golda Meir herself overruled Dayan and sent out the order to mobilize the reserves. However, by this time it was far too late to get enough troops up onto the Bar-Lev Line to prevent the Egyptians from immediately overrunning the strategic Zionist position and occupying the entire east bank of the Suez Canal, as arranged in the Rockefeller-Kissinger Mid East war plan.

The evidence makes it obvious that Rockefeller bought off Israeli Defense Minister Dayan months before the war started.

The International Bankers' Reward

Nowhere has the old adage of "to the victors go the spoils" proven more true than in the October, 1973 Mid-East war.

One of the biggest Rockefeller-CFR moves to capture Arab money was the establishment of the First Arabian Corporation, incorporated in Luxembourg with a $10 million initial capitalization by Arabs. This project was developed by New York's Kidder, Peabody & Co. (headed by Albert H. Gordon, CFR member). The First Arabian Corporation, aims to be the number one focal point for Arab investment. The corporation was organized by Roger Tamraz, Mid East representative of Kidder, Peabody & Co. The March 11, 1974 issue of Time magazine reported that "First Arabian will soon open offices on Park Avenue expressly to channel Arab funds into the U.S. Tamraz says that he plans to take over an American bank, one just below the big ten (probably a Rockefeller competitor) on behalf of his clients" and then bid for control of a nationally known industrial firm. Time reports that Tamraz will "clear every step (in advance) with Secretary of State Kissinger."

In addition to the gigantic new profits that the Rockefeller allied oil firms are making from the Rockefeller-planned skyrocketing of oil prices, the Rockefeller-CFR bankers will make even more money from the profits they earn "managing" the billions of Arab dollars flowing into CFR investment schemes.

The huge amount of Arab capital, recently doubled and tripled by the Rockefeller-planned oil price hikes, will be used by Rockefeller and his allies to take control of the little remaining independent "private enterprise" in the United States. The vast new sums of Arab capital will allow Rockefeller to set an absolute totalitarian economic monopoly. The CFR bankers' control of hundreds of billions of Arab dollars (an estimated $800 billion by 1984) will allow Rockefeller and Kissinger to destroy the last vestiges of competition, while the American people are systematically impoverished.

In 1969, the small independent oil firms were urging President Nixon to lift oil import quotas. Such a move would have allowed the import of lower-priced foreign oil while at the same time reducing the drain on our domestic oil reserves. Nixon kept the oil-import restrictions on through the winter heating oil shortage of 1972-73. The President refused to lift oil import quotas until just before the Rockefeller-planned October, 1973 Mid-East war started—which guaranteed that the foreign oil imports would have a much higher price tag. In other words, Nixon forbade the importation of (previously cheap) foreign oil until the price was greatly increased.

The new high price on imported oil means that most of the small independent oil companies can not afford to handle or deal with the imports—thus further adding to the Rockefeller-CFR gang's oil monopoly. The Rockefeller-created oil-import system cost Americans between $4 and $7 billion a year in excessive prices.

The vastness of the long-range Rockefeller-CFR oil profits can be realized in the statement of Roger Foulkes, Chief Oil Analyst of Argus Research Corporation: "A penny increase per gallon at the pumps will mean a 15% to 20% in net earnings for the average oil company." So for every 10 cents a gallon increase in gas pump prices, the Rockefeller oil gangsters make a 150% to 200% increase in net earnings.

Simon the Discordian

A severe gasoline shortage was required to keep people's minds off of the rising prices at the pumps. After waiting in line two hours or more for gas, a person will gladly shell out 75 cents a gallon just to get his tank filled (if he could buy that much gas). Once the prices were doubled there was no way that they could be rolled back. Too many Rockefeller flunkies are in the Federal Government to allow an oil price roll-back.

The main trouble for the Rockefeller gang was that by mid-December, 1973, there was still no real shortage at the pumps. Too many small independent suppliers were keeping the gasoline flowing. Something had to be done fast. Rockefeller had Nixon appoint William E. Simon as "Energy Czar." Simon had previously made millions of dollars as an investment banker at Salomon Brothers—CFR international bankers, allied to the Rockefellers.

One wonders if Simon is a member of the infamous LEGION OF DYNAMIC DISCORD, dedicated to the creation of chaos, havoc, and disruption. Because, within a few weeks of Simon's appointment as energy boss—chaos, havoc, and disruption spread to every gas station in America. The new energy chief set up a Federal gasoline program that sharply reduced gasoline supplies in areas with the highest demand. Simon successfully managed to allocate gasoline away from high demand areas and into sections of the country needing less gasoline. By February, 1974, Simon had succeeded in creating panic and long lines at the few stations receiving gasoline.

While acting as czar of all the energy, Simon made a decision which allowed the big Rockefeller-allied oil moguls to cut back their refineries to 76% capacity right smack in the middle of the "crisis."

Simon also managed to issue contradictory and confusing statements, almost daily, about the gasoline supply situation. The energy czar caused so much confusion and disruption amongst the gasoline-panicked public that the Rockefeller oil mobsters were easily able to slip through a continuous series of gasoline price hikes. Simon stirred up so much discord that few protested the price rises.

he had not even been indicted, and got a sentence of only one year, which he is serving in a safe penitentiary.

Colson and others had sought unsuccessfully a change of venue to another jurisdiction where they could expect a fairer trial: they all knew that the vicious Washington Negro jurors would find them guilty on every count and recommend maximum sentence. All their requests for change of venue were turned down by Judge Sirica. And when they appealed to the U.S. Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court, all their appeals were summarily rejected. And the reason so many other Nixon aides testified against each other was that Prosecutor Jaworski had promised them that they would get light sentences or suspended sentences and that they would thus avoid the Black Hole of Calcutta of the Negro-dominated courts and prisons.

Remarkably, none of the defense lawyers who sought a change of venue for the Watergate defendants mentioned in their pleas the obvious and most imperative reason for such a change: that the Washington juries were over 95% Negro and that practically every Negro in Washington hates Nixon and the men identified with him. And the news media that covered the Watergate trials with such great detail did not even hint that the Negroes would wreak vengeance on anyone connected with Nixon. Yet, every reporter who covers criminal trials in Washington knows that it is true and that the chances of a White person being acquitted by a D.C. jury are those of a snowball in hell.

number of coins, specified or unspecified. These coins, when spent, either find their way magically back into his purse or are automatically replaced by others. In the latter case, the purse would simply symbolize the wealth of the European Jews, seemingly limitless to his Western contemporaries. In the former case, the returning coins must stand for the money lent out and ruthlessly recovered by the Jewish moneylender. In Medieval times, such money-symbolism could have applied only to Jews, for it wasn't until the beginning of the Reformation that usury was permitted to Gentiles.

The Importance of the Legend

The Wandering Jew, then, as blasphemer, immortal, wanderer, polyglot and usurer, is a personification of the whole Jewish race. The basic themes of the legend have survived through the centuries, not for whatever literary value they might have, but for their expression of the Folk-wisdom of the West. The legend has also been utilized by writers both past and present as a basis for the portrayal of the Jewish problem. An excellent example of such work is George Sylvester Viereck and Paul Eldridge's My First Two Thousand Years (1963), which is recommended to the reader, though it is somewhat difficult to obtain, perhaps as a result of Viereck's incarceration for sedition during World War II.

As an expression of the collective European world-view, the Legend of the Wandering Jew is of great importance to an understanding of the significance of the Jew in history.
